The government is most reticent concerning the matter, and in the absence of clear information from headquarters regarding the attitude of the government, editorial comments are varied and contradictory. General Otis's future plan of campaign appears to be uncertain, but there is little chance that he will be long in bringing the insurgent rebellion to a close. With his capital in the possession of the Americans, Aguinaldo cannot hope to keep up the spirits of his followers for any length of time, while the Filippino army, after having tested the temper and endurance of the American troops, is so thoroughly scattered and demoralized that there is little likelihood of its being a source of annoyance to the American plans in Luzon or any other island of the Philippine archipelago.

General McArthur is carrying out his instructions to press the Philippine campaign to a finish in a manner which cannot fail to excite the admiration of the old soldiers on duty at home. He has kept the rebels on the run, giving them no rest, and demoralizing them by infantry charges and artillery practice. By these means he will probably compel the surrender of Aguinaldo's forces from sheer exhaustion before they can reach a point where they will have the alternative of taking to the mountains. A great many Filippinos have been captured, and their losses in killed and wounded have been severe.

The bulletin just issued by the war department regarding the progress of recruiting must be a severe disappointment to the sc-called anti-expansionists who have hoped and expected that it would be necessary to resort to conscription in order to obtain soldiers for the Philippine service. The bulletin says: "Recruiting for the regular army is progressing most satisfactorily, both in numbers and high class of young men offering. Returns received by the adjutant general up to the close of yesterday show the enlisted strength as being over 62,000, within less than 3.000 of rate of enlistment, will be reached within ten days."

Negotiations now progressing regarding Samoan affairs, have reached a point where the basis of a temporary adjustment of the existing difficulties may be reached. With this case is an extensive note on incontestable life policies.

The hacking cough, spitting of blood, weak lungs, and all similar troubles of the organs of breathing, will surely lead to consumption, if they are not already the signs of it. METHODS OF MILITARY SIGNALING.

Continental Europe is constantly experimenting in methods of military signaling. Improvements on old systems or entirely new ideas are snapped up on first sight. The illustration shows the wigwagging system, used by France, by which letters are made in accordance with the Morse alphabet. Two flags represent a dash, one flag a dot. Lanterns are used instead of flags at might. Wigwagging is also employed as a method of signaling by the military authorities of the United States.

Grippe Kills More People

Thousands die in every epidemic of la grippe like the present one and thousands die every year afterward from some weakness of the system left over from la Grippe is little feared because it is little understood. Its work is hidden—often does not appear even to the practiced eye of the physician.

A genuine, hard case of la grippe scarcely ever leaves a sound system. Nearly always there remains a weakness, a loophole for disease. The germs of la grippe are the smallest microbes known, yet they generate a toxine poison of the most virulent character.

La Grippe is in the air. You don't have to be exposed, as in other contagious diseases. The germs of grippe are everywhere at present. In one week the wave of infection crosses a continent. A nation is infected as quickly as one city. You cannot escape la grippe by isolation. You breathe in bacteria at every breath.
